

BNC To Make Changes To Zip Codes That Are Incorrect

The United States Postal Service (“USPS”) has advised that a portion of the mail sent by the Bankruptcy Noticing Center (“BNC”) is not in compliance with postal regulations for qualifying mail sort discounts. The BNC uses USPS certified software to analyze recipient addresses prior to sorting a job for printing in zip code destination order. The software examines city and street information to determine the proper recipient zip code. A postal bar code is placed on each envelope indicating the proper zip destination as determined by the software. Until recently, the BNC currently did not alter the readable zip code provided by the court and used for the mailing label, which the court obtains from the mailing matrix supplied by the debtor. Typically, as a result, the bar code printed on the envelope did not match the court provided zip code for approximately 10 percent of the overall daily volume.

To correct this problem, beginning on April 1, 2000, the BNC will use software that consults the same database used by the USPS for proper zip codification. The program will continue to supply a zip code if the address contains none. In addition, it will replace a five or nine digit zip code that is incorrect. The certificate of service will be modified to include a symbol next to addresses for which zip code corrections have been made. A sample certificate of service is attached.
